Good morning Chris. Folks who live around West Lake are holding a news conference at 1 p.m. today “demanding” removal of the nuclear waste. I know we’ve addressed before but can I get fresh comment from you about the prospects of removing the nuclear waste – what is the process for deciding what to do with the waste and where does it stand?

Unrelatedly, Suhr and I are looking into a story about the environmental impact of flooding (the Mississippi is in its third flood since April). Our hypothesis is that flooding creates more pollution because sewage treatment systems often fail in high water, fertilizer from farm fields gets into the river, etc. Is there any tracking of flood-related pollution?
